

ARRIVAL

In October of 1996, a massive coup was staged within the Russian armed forces. This new radical military faction, calling themselves the New Soviet Republic, has demanded a reunification of the region under the leadership of their General Puchevsky.

While the exact origins of the NSR are unknown, their promises of a return to the former glory of the USSR have convinced many to support their cause in spite of the violence they have used to achieve their goals thus far.

Over the past several months, an escalating series of military raids has led Russia to request assistance from NATO forces. NSR forces have captured several key airbases and have effectively cut Russia off from much of their Southern border.

NATO forces are arriving at Sochi today to establish a base of operations in the volatile region along the Russia-Abkhazia border. NSR forces control much of the nearby territory, and have been testing Sochi's defenses as well as executing an unrelenting series of attacks on forces stationed in the nearby city of POLYANA. NATO is hopeful that their presence will act as a deterrent to further attacks along the border.

USAF FORCES: ARRIVAL

Western coalition aircraft will be arriving in the theatre today, as well as several C-17 cargo planes, an E3 AWACS, and a KC-135 tanker. Aircraft will enter Russian airspace near Anapa-Vityazevo and continue along the Black Sea coast to Sochi-Adler, where they will land and begin establishing our base of operations in the region.

Despite plans to fly straight to Sochi-Adler, a faulty hydraulic system in one of the C-17s forced USAF aircraft to land in Ukraine for repairs. In light of our now obvious arrival, your aircraft have been armed in the event of hostile activity.
